

Media information 2024

Ekko is the leading Danish magazine when it comes to serious, in-depth studies of film. Ekko's readers are dedicated and highly demanding. They watch the best films first and engage in the modern media with both curiosity and a keen critical sense.

The magazine features a number of the country's leading voices, including the Danish Broadcasting Corporation's expert in popular culture Jakob Stegelmann, film critic Bo Green Jensen, film historian Peter Schepelern, film directors Susanne Bier, Nikolaj Arcel and Lone Scherfig, authors Lars Bukdahl and Carsten Jensen and many others.

Ekko also has a dedicated reporter in Hollywood who is responsible for the magazine's exclusive interviews with stars like Julianne Moore, Clint Eastwood, George Clooney and Scarlett Johansson.

Ekko's readers

- are highly educated and students
- are decision makers and opinion formers within the cultural field
- are members of the Danish film industry
- read the Culture section before reading the rest of the newspaper. Films are more than light entertainment for our readers.
- are at the cutting edge of new tendencies in cultural life
- attend the art house cinemas
- are students and teachers who use Ekko in film classes at school

Distribution and publishing

Ekko is published four times each year. The circulation averages 10.500 copies. A number of associations – among others Danish Film Directors, the Danish Producers Association, the TV Group of the Danish Union of Journalists and FAF (union of film and television workers) – have signed collective subscriptions for their members.

The magazine can be purchased at 250 newsstands, bookstores and cinemas across the country.

Website

Ekkofilm.dk is Ekko's website, where you can find news from the Danish and international film scene, read reviews, background articles and interviews. Ekkofilm.dk creates debates and opinions.

Kenneth Turan, film critic, Los Angeles Times

»I'm very impressed by the quality of your publication«

Klaus Rifbjerg, author:

»It's an honour to write for Ekko«

Politiken (one of the major national newspapers in Denmark):

»The writers are practically a blue book of the best writers in Danish film criticism ... add to that a broad selection of topics, from the purely entertaining to the academic, an approach to film that sets the agenda and is current without being predictable and some excellent reviews, and you have a magazine that is superior to the rest«

Per Fly, film director:

»A magazine written by people who both know about and dare to debate style as well as substance in Danish cinema. That's important«

Karen Klitgaard Poulsen, media researcher:

»This sort of balance between sparkling, glossy material and still having some weight has not been seen in Denmark before«

Woody Allen, film director

»This is one hell of a magazine«
